

Gentleman's Guide -

Monologue #2

D'ysquith (Lord Bartholomew) monologue

The problem with this country is that everybody is weak! Have you studied eugenics, my friend? We must find a way to prevent the unfit from multiplying themselves? If we fail, I'm afraid the Empire is likely to slip through England's grasp. I spent the weekend at Highhurst with my cousin the Earl. The gluttony! The endless, extravagant meals! Why, I myself sit on the Council of the London Vegetarian Society! Have you tried yogurt culture? Delicious. And a natural laxative, don't you know? I myself had a yogurt enema just the other day. Why not skip the middle man?